In today's demanding economic environment, collaboration among businesses and the establishment of a cluster within Cyprus's furniture and woodworking sector are essential to address the industry's key challenges, including fragmentation, limited competitiveness, and the lack of technological modernisation.

The primary objective of this seminar is to serve as a catalyst for the creation of a collaborative ecosystem that will enhance productivity and innovation while strengthening the sector's competitiveness, sustainability, and long-term growth.

Key benefits for participants will include gaining a better understanding of the advantages of collaboration, such as economies of scale, access to new markets, and technological upgrading. The seminar will also highlight local challenges and opportunities and present practical steps towards the establishment of an industry cluster.

The seminar will take place on 7 and 8 November 2026 in Limassol, Cyprus.

Places are limited, as most available seats have already been filled.
